The witch hunt, as characterized by these criteria, is shown to function as a negative normative structure for evaluating argumentation used in particular cases.

The witch hunt as a structure of argumentation - Doug Walton

The terminology -- including the words hag-riding and witchcraft -- are more European than African, but are especially common in the black community in Virginia, Maryland, and the Carolinas, where a great deal of English and Germanic folklore has entered into hoodoo.] This material is reprinted from Life of William Grimes, the Runaway Slave.
